"There are so many physiological differences between men and women that it is hard to believe they belong to the same species," says this noted psychologist.

WHY A WOMAN CAN'T BE LIKE A MAN

by DR. IRVING DOBE

Not long ago, a splendid young hedgesman sought a divorce because his wife "big girl has legs" as a promiscuous fashion whenever she walked down the street. Not only did this casually conduct excite the gleeful applause of the boys in front of the cigar store, but their shrill comments caused him "insoluble mental suffering." To the delighted judge's questions regarding the tail-wagging lady's manner of locomotion during their courtship, the young man boldly replied that it had been the same. But he (and he contrived [wags]) felt that after

How to Relate a Conquest

by ROBERT KNOX

ANY YOUNG BACHELOR worthy of his earnings knows that his command success as a female Dom Juan depends in large part on maintaining the reputation he has so painstakingly acquired over his years as a practicing rogue—maintaining it and whenever possible capitalizing it.

Nothing so smooth as his need to maintain himself as an image which placates him and, to the extent of his amorous ambitions, taps is offset that she is about to be excited by a wonderful and well earned male sexual conquests before her have found utterly irresistible and therefore, what chance does your tale for him, really, in the face of such a marvellously overwhelming onslaught?
